

Sponsored by

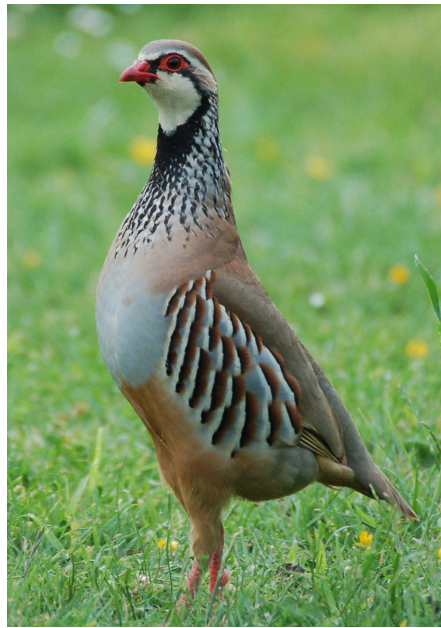

Our partners

Grey Partridge

Usually looks hunched and rounded, dark brown with no obvious pattern.

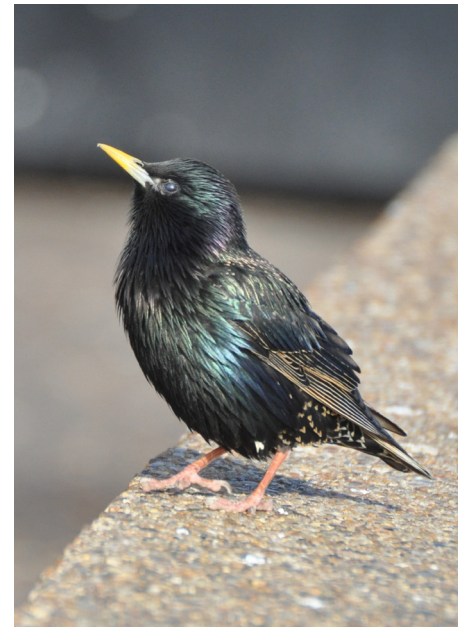

bfbc.org.uk/greypart

Red-legged partridge

Distinctive black and white face pattern.

bfbc.org.uk/redleggedpartridge

Starling

Adults are glossy blackish and spotted white in winter. Typically sings from trees or chimney pots with dropped wings.

bfbc.org.uk/starling

Yellowhammer

Male – vivid yellow on head and breast, with dark streaks. Slender, streaky brown and black with a long black, white-sided tail. Female – slender, pale, yellow-buff on head and breast with thin streaks.

bfbc.org.uk/yellowhammer

Skylark

Larger than a sparrow, almost starling-sized, with triangular wings, broad, square tail with white sides. In flight reveals a whitish line along the back edge of the wing.

bfbc.org.uk/skylark

Meadow pipit

Smaller than a skylark; thin black streak beneath, white edges to tail. Most often seen in flight. Appears to parachute to the ground.

bfbc.org.uk/meadowpipit

Sponsored by

Our partners

Corn bunting

Pale buff – brown, paler underneath, with dark streaks. Tail shows no white. Big pale bill.
bfbc.org.uk/cornbunting

Tree sparrow

Smart, pale brown cap, white collar and a black cheek spot. Bright streaked underparts. Sexes alike. bfbc.org.uk/treesparrow

Chaffinch

Common, sparrow-sized; two white bars across the wing and white sides to tail. Male – soft pinkish beneath.
bfbc.org.uk/chaffinch

Reed bunting

Female/winter male has dark cheeks and cap, with a paler strip over eye. Female streaked like a pipit with a red brown back and wings. Male in spring has a black head and a white collar.
bfbc.org.uk/reedbunting

House sparrow

Male – rich red-brown with a grey patch on top of the head and a black bib. Female – unstreaked beneath, no white in the wings or tail. bfbc.org.uk/housesparrow

Linnet

Female – streaked brown with a browner head. Male – grey head with a red forehead and chest in spring. Blackish outer wing with a pale patch made up of thin white streaks. bfbc.org.uk/linnet